News December 2012

Happy Holidays

The NVIC would like to wish you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. The institute will be closed from 25 December 2012 until 8 January 2013. We hope to see you all in the New Year.

Cleveringa workshop and Lecture Report:

This year's theme for the Cleveringa lecture and workshop at the Netherlands-Flemish Institute was "The Development of the Image of Children in Children's Literature". The workshop during the day was chaired by Professor Helma van Lierop, Professor for Juvenile and Children literature, Department of Dutch language and Culture, at Leiden University. In the evening, Professor van Lierop read the Cleveringa lecture. >>Read more

The First International Chariot Conference

The First International Chariot Conference, jointly organised by the American University in Cairo and the Netherlands-Flemish Institute in Cairo, took place on Friday 30 November and 1 & 2 December. The conference was held at the NVIC, with specialists from all over the world attending. This exciting conference covered a wide variety of topics, although the focus remained on ancient Egyptian chariots. >>Read more

It is that time of the year again: the Cairo Semester for Egyptology students started 28 October and lasts until 22 December. A large group of enthusiastic MA students, 17 in total, will be taught all ins and outs of Egypt and of archaeology in the field. Besides visiting sites, the students will develop own research, based on the collection in the Egyptian Museum. Attending the First International Chariot Conference on 1 and 2 December is also part of the programme this year. A diary is kept at our website. >>Read more
